Using Forex Trend Console

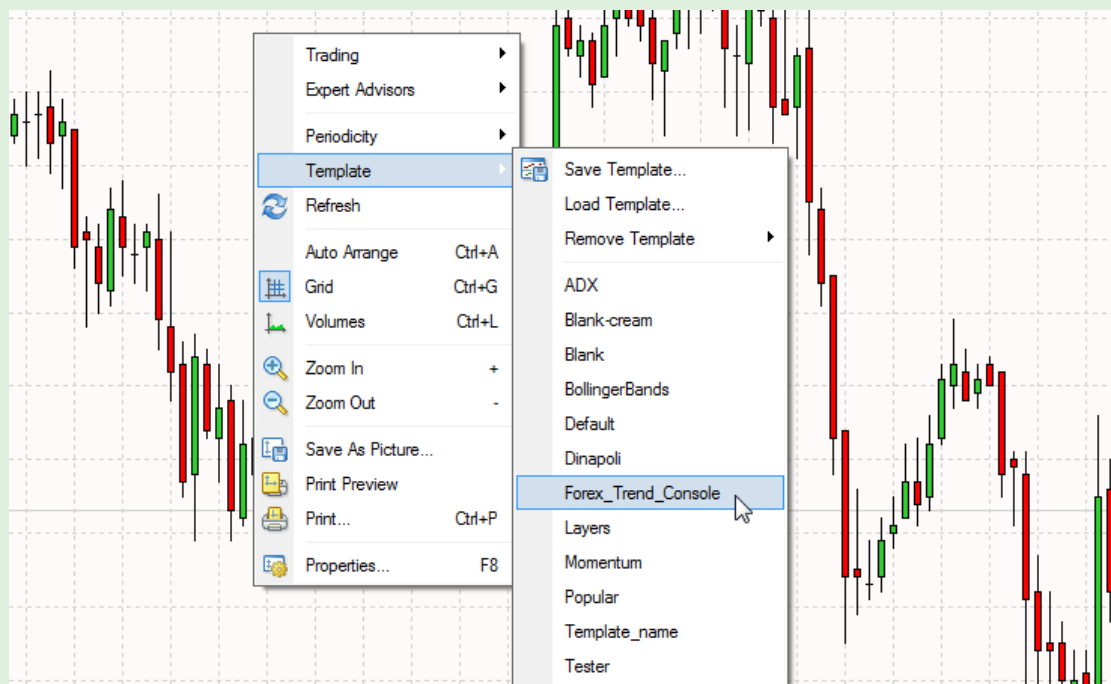

To start using the Forex Trend Console open a chart, any chart – it doesn't matter which currency pair you open. The Trend Console will analyze all currency pairs, as well as gold, silver, commodities, stocks, indices... It's up to you!

In a minute we'll explain how to control which currencies or other markets are analyzed by the Forex Trend Console.

But for a start, just open a chart:

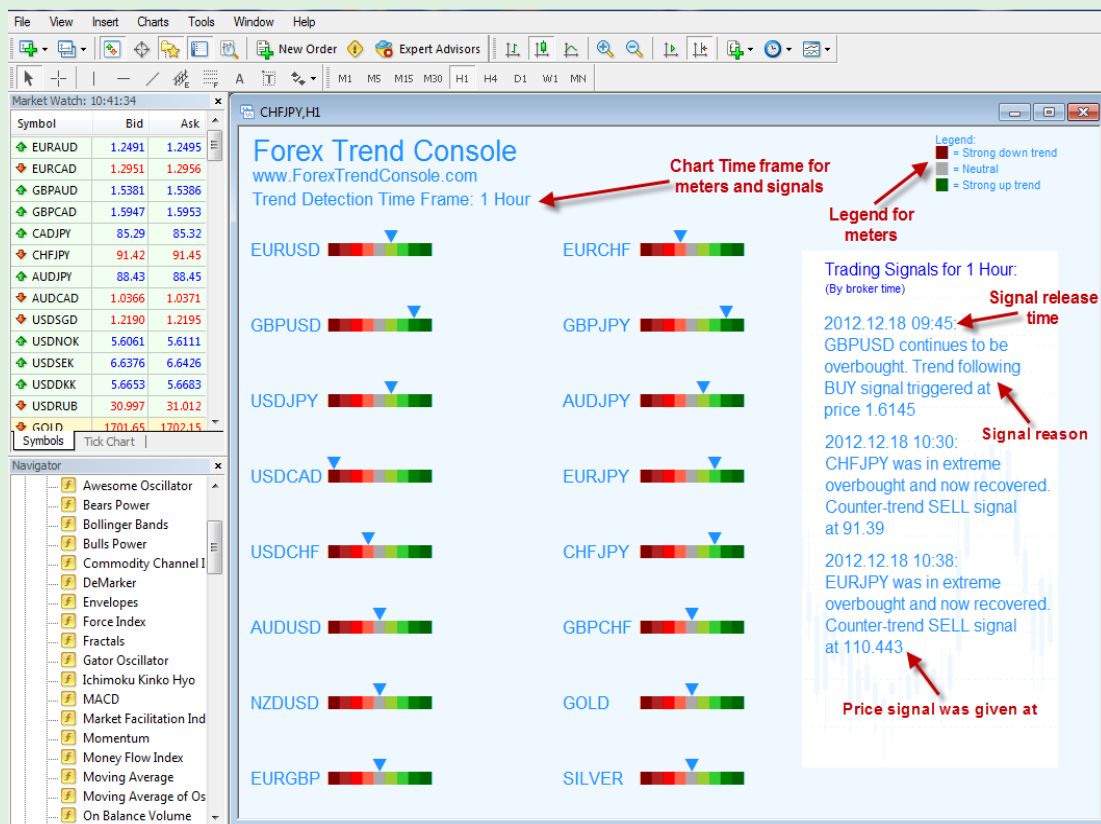

Then, on an empty space on the chart, right click your mouse and from the pop up menu hover over Template, then choose ForexTrendConsole:

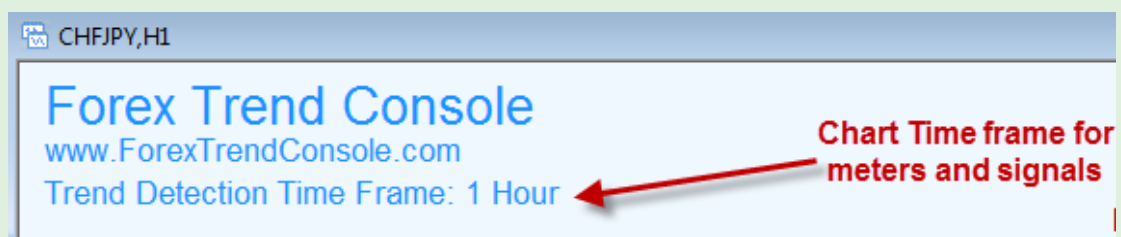

You will now see the console placed on the chart (the chart itself will disappear since you don't need it now – the Forex Trend Console works on all currencies simultaneously!).

This is what you get:

The meters display the direction of the trend and the strength of the trend.

Both the direction and trend are measured using the time frame you have chosen for the chart!

Now let's see exactly what is being measured:

Direction:

If the blue triangle is pointing to one of the left most blocks, the ones that are in shades of red, then the direction of the trend is DOWN (short).

If the blue triangle is pointing to one of the right most blocks, the ones that are in shades of green, then the direction of the trend is UP (long).

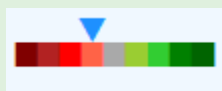

Strength:

The position of the blue triangle marks the strength of the trend in each of the currency pairs on screen.

If the triangle is at the extreme left, it means the trend is very strong:

If it is a bit off the left, the trend has some strength, but not as extreme. The further away from the extreme, the less powerful the trend is. For example, this is how a weak down trend looks like:

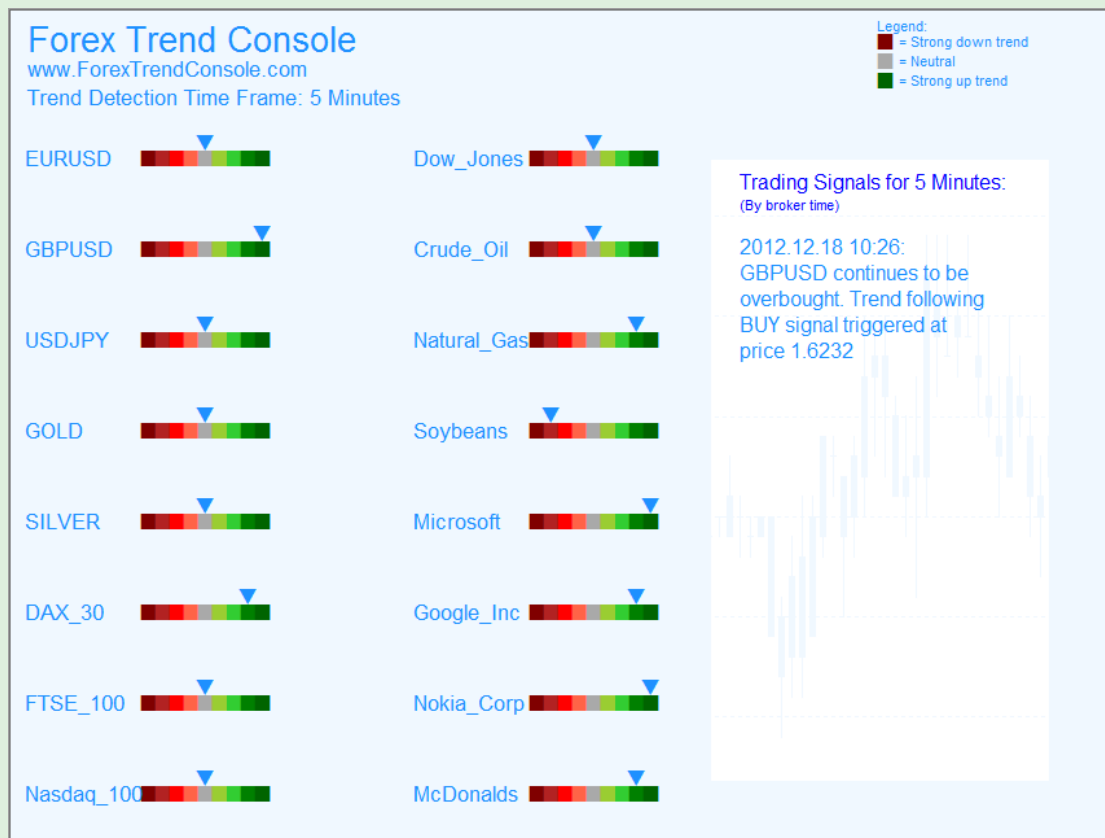

If the triangle is at the exact center (gray) box, there is no clearly defined trend. The market is ranging:

How to add/remove currencies and other markets?

The Forex Trend Console enables you (from version 1.2 onwards) to get signals and meters for ANY currency pair, commodity, index or stock you'd like to use!

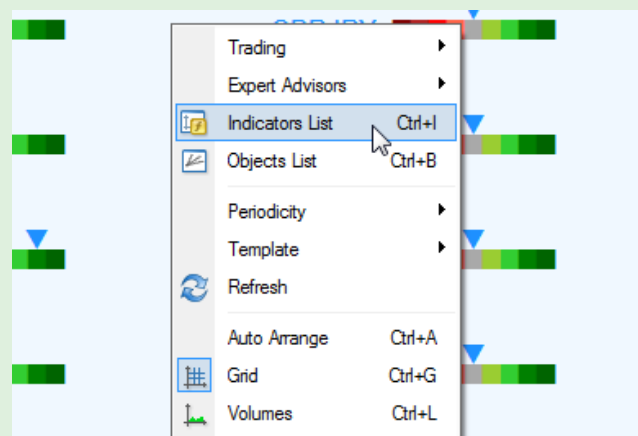

For example, your console could look like this:

Note: if you haven't got the latest version, or if your version doesn't enable to add and change symbol as described below, be sure to register here, and you'll get the latest version immediately emailed to you: Get Updates and Upgrades

Right-click a blank area on the chart, and from the popup menu choose: Indicators List

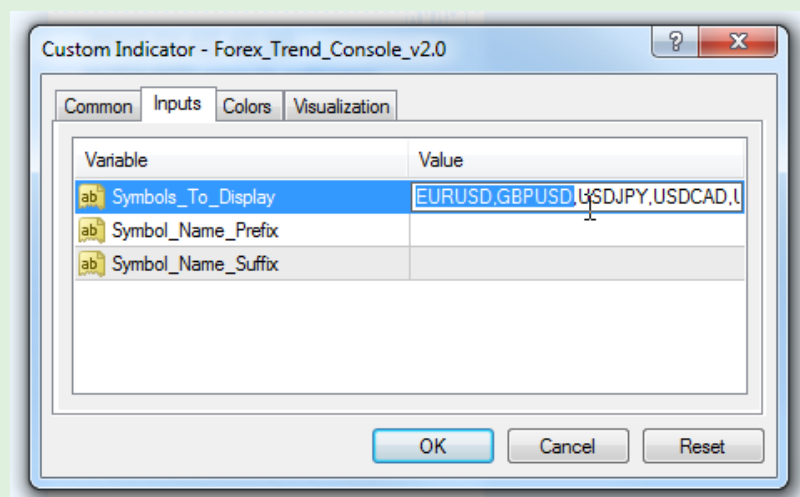

2.

In the window that opened click `Forex_Trend_Console_v...` and then click the Edit button:

3.

Click the Inputs tab, then double-click the list of symbols to be able to edit it:

4. Now write any symbol you like (you can use MetaTrader's Market Watch window to find the exact names of symbols). Up to 16 symbols can be included in a single chart.

Place commas between the symbol names, as appears in the example above. Do not put any spaces between the names or the commas.

For example:

EURUSD,GBPUSD,USDJPY,OIL,WHEAT,GOLD,SILVER,NATGAS

Tip:

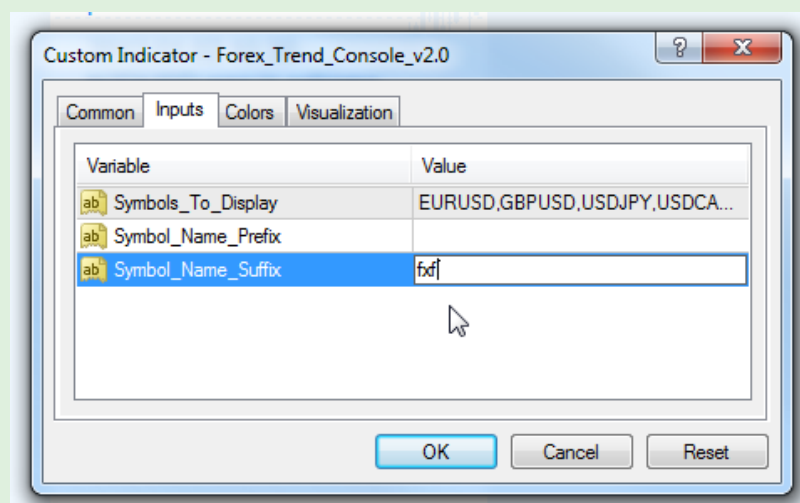

If you have a list of favorite symbols you'd like to re-use in the future, you can write it down in a simple Google document or Word document, then copy and paste it inside the Symbols_To_Display input box.

For example:

EURUSD,GBPUSD,USDJPY,USDCHF,GOLD,SILVER,DAX,FTSE,Nasdaq,
OIL,NATGAS,WHEAT,Microsoft,Google,Nokia,McDonalds

Note: if you broker uses a prefix or a suffix after the symbol name, for example the letters fxf are added after each symbol, then you need to input that suffix (or prefix) in the appropriate input box:

That's all folks!

Hope you'll use this system as the main building block of your trading success. We've worked hard and made extensive efforts to make this as helpful and profitable tool as possible.
