The Support Resistance MTF Indicator

With this indicator you will be able to detect high probability reversals setups.

The Support/Resistance MTF indicator is one of the key elements to detect my favorite setup type: Golden Setups

The indicator detects so called "untouched" support and resistance price levels which nearly always produce a sharp reversal once the untouched price level is reached.

Additional benefits with the indicator are:

- detects support/resistance from higher time frames
- you can configure how the support/resistance is detected

The following screenshot shows how the untouched support/resistance price levels are drawn (and how the price usually reacts at these levels):

With this indicator you will have an additional information advantage:

While you are searching on lower time frames like M30/H1 for entry opportunities you will see the major support / resistance price levels e.g. from the weekly time frame.

You can get the Support/Resistance MTF Indicator for a small one-time-fee. For a limited time only 29 Euro instead of 59,- Euro:

The following screenshot shows the configuration parameters of the indicator:

Tips:

- For the trading systems which are presented on this website the weekly time frame is the best fit to draw support/resistance levels. The weekly time frame is the default setting

- Place this indicator multiple times (2 - 3 times) on the price chart with different settings of the parameter candlesLeftRight. The parameter candlesLeftRight defines which recent highs/lows are detected. The default value for the parameter candlesLeftRight is 3. If you add the indicator a second time to the price chart with e.g. candlesLeftRight = 6 then you will probably see additional support/resistance levels. If you want then you can add the indicator a third time with e.g. candlesLeftRight = 9. You can play with the numbers and see the results.
